ELIXIR DEVELOPER

You will work in a dynamic organization in the team building the heartbeat of Enreach using Elixir.

THE ROLE

We are offering a flexible way to create PBX systems integrated with, amongst other features, instant messaging, chat rooms, presence, audio/video conferencing, meeting rooms. Our focus is to develop the world's best and most innovative next-generation Unified Communication Platform that features high availability, horizontal scalability, multicast replication, redundancy, security (TLS, SRTP) and extreme performance.

You will be part of a professional development team in the Netherlands. In addition to the developers, the team consists of QA Engineers, DevOps Engineers and a Product Owner. You will enjoy enhancing our communication platform to make it even more relevant to our partners and their customers. You will work together with other teams to make sure technologies align across this platform to provide the best ongoing and reliable experience.

WHO ARE YOU?

You'll be working as an Elixir Engineer on 1 or more products. The main product is a Video conferencing application (named Meetings) built using WebRTC. The signaling server is implemented in Elixir and relies on Janus Gateway for handling media. You'll be working on scaling and implementing new features for Meetings. You'll also be working on integrating Meetings with the greater Enreach platform using Apache Pulsar as a message bus.

Mandatory:

- More than 1 year of experience in either Elixir or Erlang. Otherwise experience in at least 1 functional programming language and familiarity with the Actor Model and proven ability to learn quickly.

- Experience with WebRTC or related (Media/RTC related experience)

- Experience and willingness to do automated testing (Integration/unit tests)

Preferable:

- Javascript

- Mysql

- Kubernetes

WHAT WE OFFER
